Ampatuans 'VIPs' in jail

They have cell phones, catered meals in PNP camp

GENERAL SANTOS CITY—Even in their detention cell, the Ampatuans appear to live like kings.

The suspects in the Nov. 23 massacre of 37 people in Maguindanao apparently have mobile phones, catered meals, even someone who comes daily to clean their cell in the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) compound at the Philippine National Police headquarters at Camp Crame, C. Davao.

Four members of the powerful clan that once enjoyed a close friendship with President Manlapid-Arroyo are being held at the CIDG lockup. They are brothers—Eduardo Ampatuan, suspended governor of the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao; Sulpicio Ampatuan, former acting governor of Maguindanao; and Nasser Ampatuan, mayor of Shariff Aguak. The other is their uncle—Alond Ampatuan, vice governor of Maguindanao.

Members of the media are barred from entering the CIDG compound. There is even a notice posted at the CIDG gate specifying the schedule of visits to the Ampatuans.

But it was observed that the Ampatuan brothers, friends, relatives and

ALL 29 PUBLIC SCHOOLS converted into temporary shelters for residents fleeing a feared explosive eruption of Mayon Volcano are expected to resume for classes today, Albay Gov. Joey Salceda said yesterday.

Disaster relief officials launched a massive cleanup in terms of thousands of residents began returning home on Saturday after the respite Mayor Salceda showed signs of calming down.

"What we are doing now is evaluating damage assessment. We are in an early recovery stage," Salceda told reporters. "We are clearing up schools and classrooms so that classes can resume [on Monday]."

Salceda said fire trucks had been brought in to lower down sanitation facilities that were overwhelmed when close to 50,000 people were evacuated over the past three weeks for fear of a

A HALL IN CAMP CRAME where policemen held parties and other social gatherings has been transformed into a courtroom in time for the start on Tuesday of the multiple murder trial of Arroyo Ampatuan Jr., the prime suspect in the Nov. 23 massacre in Maguindanao.

Located on the second floor of the Noncommissioned Officers' Clubhouse, the 600-square-meter, air-conditioned social hall has been furnished with refurbished benches for Quezon City Judge Jocelyn Solis-Reyes and the lawyers, according to Chief Supt. Leonardo Pagano, the spokesperson of the Philippine National Police.

The benches were last used in trials during the time of the Philippine Constabulary, one of two national police forces organized in 1900 by the administrative authority appointed by the United States. The PNP replaced the Constabulary after 96 years.

"Some of the benches are still in use, so the PNP chief, Director General Jesus Verano, ordered that they be refurbished for the trial," Pagano said yesterday in a phone interview.

Verano had also ordered the con-

Rock star Bono calls for tougher Internet controls

WASHINGTON—IRISH ROCK STAR Bono called Sunday for tougher controls over the spread of counterfeit property over the Internet, arguing that file sharing and sharing hard copies of cultural products.

"The only thing protecting the music and TV industries from the time that has been music and behind the newspaper business is the size of the file," he said after the band 12 years in an open press in The New York Times.

He pointed out that "the insatiable love of bandwidth" indicates that technology is just a few years from allowing viewers to download entire movies in just a few seconds.

Ex-GMA lawyer heads Noynoy legal team

By Philip C. Tabara

FORMER DEFENSE CHIEF JUANLO Cruz Jr. has a new job—defending Noynoy's votes.

Cruz, who was once chief presidential legal counsel and defense secretary of President Macapagal-Arroyo, will head the legal team that will protect the votes of Liberal Party standard-bearer Sen. Rodrigo "Noynoy" Duterte II as well as their election results.

"One is heading our very private law firm, our army of lawyers who will also train our volunteers," Burch told,

Aguino's campaign manager, said yesterday.

Stay out of danger zone, Phivolcs warns Mayon residents

MAYON VOLCANIC ACTIVITY continued to decrease yesterday, but the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology (Phivolcs) cautioned to stay alert against resuming work in the danger zone.

Only one volcanic eruption and 30 rock falls related to the eruption of lava fragments from Mayon's upper slopes were recorded during the last 24-hour observation period. Phivolcs said it is still in danger.

Volcanologists were unable to observe erupting activity from Mayon because dark clouds covered the summit. But a 10:45 a.m. glow was observed on Saturday night, it added.

On Saturday morning, after clouds retreated from the volcano, rain increased at an average of 2.8 millimeters.

Phivolcs had previously issued 12 volcanic warnings and 50 rock falls when it lowered its hazardous the volcano's status level to 3, which indicated no event, all gradual decrease of activity and with low probability of a hazardous explosive eruption.

It cautioned as its bulletin that there should be "no human activity" within the 8-kilometer permanent danger zone around the volcano and the 7-km extended danger zone, as well as the southeast part because of shallow eruptions that could trigger dangerous volcanic flows.

"People making about 100,000 danger zones are also advised to observe precautions associated with post-eruption activity such as rock falls, pyroclastic flows, and ash fallouts, which can also occur very close to the summits of lava deposits in danger zones," it said.

Phivolcs continues to monitor volcanic activities in adjacent areas from Mayon to the south, including Mount Apo.

Party seeks poll funds on Internet

A SMALL CRIBER-BARRIED POLITICAL party which is holding provincial and other national campaigns in the May elections has turned to the Internet to solicit badly needed funds.

In what could be a first to the country, Ang Kapigiran has opened a page on Facebook (<https://www.facebook.com/ang.kapigiran>) opened to solicit contributions to police and US dollars through credit cards.

The donor will be directed to an Internet payment page maintained by the Manila-based E-Serve Corp.

"We'll need resources to cover our propaganda," the message on the payment page (<http://www.eserve.com/ang.kapigiran/>) said, detailing how the credit payment would be billed.

A batch of the websites of the major political parties, as well as of their presidential candidates, showed no features for straight-to-pay donations. Most, however, listed phone numbers, e-mails and addresses of party chapters and headquarters that contributors could contact.

Ang Kapigiran is led by Pangasinan City councilor John Carlos de los Reyes as its presidential candidate.

"It's a misperception that Ang Kapigiran is rich in campaign funds because of our connections with Church groups," de los Reyes told the business news interview. Armando Arling

Ray of hope for Manny's fight

By Francis T.J. Ordoña

A RAY OF HOPE HAS BEEN SHED INTO THE DUNGY MANQUINO-Floyd Mayweather bout that has been weighed down by drug testing issues, with the fight club both teams saying "something could be happening" and Mayweather's promoter, Eddie Larned, saying "the biggest fight in history... is the fight."

Boxing analyst Larry Merchant also shared in his optimism, saying there is "a lot of money involved" for the fight and to push through, despite indications that both camps are far from a consensus.

In a report posted at espn.com, reported boxing journalist Michael Haynes noted a source within Team Mayweather that it was standing by its proposal to subject both fighters to rigorous Olympic-style random drug testing before the bout.

"There will be no Mayweather-Pacquiao fight unless they agree to random blood and urine testing with a mutually agreeable pre-fight cutoff time. That's every," said Haynes's Team Mayweather source.

Given various reasons, Pacquiao has refused the conditions set by the Mayweather camp, apparently ruled as the idea that he was being pressured in a drug cheat.

And the Filipino ring team has even declined an option to have former United States presidential candidate Sen. John McCain, an ex-fighter and noted fight fan, arbitrate the dispute.

Still, Merchant said USA Today that he believes the fight will happen.

"There's no such money involved here," he said. "There is a lot of money involved here, but not in the billions of dollars that the fight will get made if they can't come to terms for a March fight, then I think it's bigger in some way than."

From last week's said Mayweather "something could be happening," but then Jay Raskin "the priority before any fight with anybody is to clear Mayweather."

From said Mayweather is using drug in some way to win out of the fight.

"Why all these demands for this fight, for the fight?" Mayweather asked from an agency.

Merchant said boxing espn.com that they are "trying to make a deal. We feel that this is the biggest fight in the history of boxing. We want to give this fight to the fans."

Ginebra's 2 aces still in sick bay

By Huang K. Castillo

UNDER CACEDAS AND INJURY BILDER head, Barangay Ginebra's Pat and the Pines combination, are already doing some stretches and drills in their practice court during the just completed buildup.

But don't expect either of them to be playing again.

The two, 32-year-old (Ginebra) is a "making" coach Ang Lichico told the business over the phone yesterday when asked of the progress of the two injured players, an obviously the bones and soul of the Gin Kings who have played for two years since joining coach Lichico's OFC, NIP Philippines Cup.

"We will not have them play unless we are very sure that everything is OK as they have been in the hospital," Lichico added. "Such as what happened to Mark, he is in his play in the state of the season and then after two games, he is in the hospital again."

Lichico said that the two, said Andy Alameda, another injured player, have been started playing practice and are of being asked to play in scrimmages and pre-season buildups.

"We are limited when only," Lichico said. "We don't want to put them in the hospital and then after two games, he is in the hospital again."

The self-spoken coach could not come up with a date frame on the day's return, though he said that he hopes that it would be in time for the playoffs at least.

Right now, the Gin Kings are at 7-6, tied for fourth spot with their second Finals berth.

Their primary aim this point is to keep the team with automatic playoff berth, as the Gin Kings side has been willing to accept for most of the elimination round of the season-opening tournament.

Ginebra had defeated champion Talk 'N Text in a crucial game when their season "broke" after a 12-day break when the Gin Kings side is away back into tonight quarterfinals and semifinals in the other game against Rain or Shine at the Araneta Coliseum.

There are heroes all around us.

Presenting the winners of the Gawad Haydee Yorac for Outstanding Public Service and Leadership.

It takes more than just a single act of service to make a Gawad Haydee Yorac hero. It takes a lifetime dedicated to serving others with sincerity, passion, humility, integrity and most of all, vision. This is why, in a country of heroes, we are looking for a role model whose heroism towers above the rest. Like Tony P. Melillo, founder of Gawad Kalinga and the 1st Gawad Haydee Yorac awardee; Dr. Mariano M. Sison, educator and economist, President and CEO of Tyngsboro Foundation; 2nd Gawad Haydee Yorac awardee, and the 3rd joint awardee—Dr. Christopher C. Bernido and Dr. Ma. Victoria C. Bernido, advocates, physicians and founders of the Research Center for Theoretical Physics in Dagupan, Ilocos. People who have been serving their country in the tradition of the woman after whom it was named: the late Haydee Yorac, who unselfishly dedicated her life to serving the nation in excellence.

Chances are, you know a few just like them. Nominate them for the 4th Gawad Haydee Yorac, and help us recognize the unsung hero heroes of our nation, while they are here to hear the applause.

Deadline for nominations: January 15, 2012 at 5:00 pm. Download the guidelines and nomination form at www.merlco.com.ph/gawadhaydeeyorac or contact the Gawad Haydee Yorac Secretariat at Tel. Nos. 632-8801522/88015 or email gawadhaydeeyorac@merlco.com.ph

New RP football coach optimistic

By Code P. Tapes

BRITISH FOOTBALL MENTOR DEBORAH Budge will make his coaching debut for the Philippine national team during the Philippines Sevens Series in the Philippines Cup in Cebu, Cebu, Taiwan last month.

Budge arrived in Manila yesterday in his flight chair, before he left for the 10-year-old Budge could turn the fortunes around of the national squad, which has failed to qualify for the last two international tournaments.

"It's a massive challenge, but we have to get started," Budge readily said.

Budge will get his baptism of fire in the first day tournament where the Filipinos will go up against the Chinese Taipei national team in the 10:00 a.m. match from Nishi Stadium, Manila, 10.

Budge has worked for Premier League team Tottenham Hotspur, where he served as youth team coach and discovered current England international players like Gareth Bale and Arsenal's Theo Walcott. He also had management stints in Singapore and Uzbekistan.

He came to the Philippines as a "specialist" to help the national team improve its physical fitness and increase the ball quickly.

Court upholds Fujimori jail term

LIMA—THE PERUVIAN Supreme Court on Sunday unanimously upheld a 25-year prison sentence for the country's former president Alberto Fujimori, who has been convicted of human rights abuses.

A Supreme Court review of Fujimori's conviction was imposed by a statute by the defense lawyers, who asked the high court to review his conviction.

"None of the 10 pieces of evidence that were used to convict him were admissible," the defense lawyers said.

The defense lawyers also asked the court to review the conviction of Fujimori's ministers in the kidnapping of a journalist and a diplomat in 1995, claiming they were not guilty.

Malaysia gov't to contest court verdict on Allah ban

KUALA LUMPUR—MALAYSIAN government has pledged to challenge a court ruling that Christians face restrictions on using the word Allah in religious texts.

The High Court earlier Thursday had upheld an appeal by Muslim groups, claiming that the ban on the word Allah in religious texts was unconstitutional.

A MOUNTAIN landslide buried a road in Brazil, the country's largest city, on the edge of the Amazon rain forest, on Monday. A landslide buried a road in Brazil, the country's largest city, on the edge of the Amazon rain forest, on Monday.

Brazil landslides bury hotel, kill 63

REDA, DON, RED, BRAZIL—Rescue on Sunday searched for more bodies from an outbreak of mud and debris that buried a luxury Brazilian hotel filled with New Year's revelers, as the death toll from heavy rains in the south of the country soared to 63.

Twenty-eight people were killed in the tragedy at the hotel on Rio Grande—some 100 kilometers southeast of Rio de Janeiro—and another six were injured.

State officials said another landslide in the nearby city of Angra dos Reis, south of Rio, left at least 13 people dead, part of a series of landslides brought on by torrential rain that have killed at least 10 people across the state of Rio de Janeiro since Wednesday and left dozens missing.

Authorities said flood Friday was full in capacity with about 40 people, including children, trapped in the New Year at the hotel's outdoor swimming pool.

The complex is nestled at the bottom of a jungle-covered hillside which gave way before dawn, the day on New Year's Day traditions ing the water poured into a hill. "It was a devastating rain, I've never heard anything like it...a flood, disaster, that wouldn't stop," Judge Carlos Martins, a local magistrate, told Brazil news website UOL.

"There was a lot of mud, mud, rain—trees falling and taking away everything," said Martins, 22, who described how he and his father helped rescue some 40 people as the landslide enveloped the area.

But, deputy governor Ivo Pinheiro Pinheiro said it was "a vision of horror," describing to CNN video as "a mountain of mud and trees covering everything." He said heavy rain had been poured out for consecutive days during the holiday period.

A fire chief said the landslide at the hotel site could rise to 40, and rescue teams were spending their search hours and waiting for the possibility of new landslides.

"The whole area is in serious danger of new landslides due to the vegetation," the department commander Pedro Machado told Globo news.

About 100 rescue workers and firefighters, aided by rescue dogs, combed the remains of mud, rocks and debris two miles in the hope of finding survivors on Rio Grande, but "the chances of finding survivors are very small," Machado said.

"The rescue was heavy equipment because of the risk of more of new landslides," he said.

Authorities said some 300 people would likely remain inside or at the hotel, adding that most of the bodies recovered earlier were found on land. At least three more had been pulled from the sea.

It is still not known if there were survivors among the dead. Hotel building, which opened in 1994, catered to Brazilian and foreign tourists looking for a remote beachside hideaway.

The island, whose tropical beach can only be reached by boat, is the last leg in a tourist route that included with private transportation.

In the coastal office of Angra dos Reis, a rescue team on the coastline overlooking the Grande Bay about 150 kilometers south of Rio, another landslide buried several houses, killing at least 13, according to a provincial statement.

A top-100 list from Google said "the natural risk is very severe" in coastal cities, including beach, where dark vegetation grows in unstable ground on steep, rocky terrain.

"The occupation of coastal areas is greatly increasing the risk of accidents," Adam de Barros, senior director of the Technology Research Institute, told the newspaper Folha de São Paulo.

Although the rain stopped on Friday, authorities say an alert because of fears of potentially devastating landslides in its densely populated hillside areas, as heavy rains.

The landslide have forced 4,000 people to leave their homes near Rio de Janeiro state—about the same number allowed by similar landslides which hit the state last year.

Bomb suspect 'reached out' to UK militants, says news report

LONDON—BRITISH SECURITY SERVICES have three years ago that the Nigerian suspect of trying to blow up a US-bound plane "reached out" to British Islamic extremists in Britain, a newspaper reported on Saturday.

Umar Faruk Abdulmutallab, 22, charged with trying to blow up Northwest Flight 253 from Amsterdam on a suspected Dec. 25 Christmas Eve, ended in London between 2005 and 2008.

The Sunday Times quoted security services officials as saying that, during his London stay, Abdulmutallab had been "reaching out" to militants who were under surveillance by British security service MI6.

None of the information was passed to US officials, which will prompt questions about intelligence failures before the attack, the newspaper said in an article posted on its website.

It said British officials had now passed the 30, their US counterparts on Abdulmutallab's activities while he was a student at University College London (UCL).

The file showed his frequent contacts with 500 targets who were subject to phone taps, e-mail intercepts and other forms of surveillance, the report said.

Obama has named "human and spiritual leaders" for offering the best chance, saying information available to intelligence reports should have been passed rapidly. British intelligence officials had advised on their decision not to flag Abdulmutallab as a possible terrorist risk, saying he was one of many youths who joined with no-militarist but who were not themselves thought as he involved in planning or supporting terrorism, the Sunday Times said.

It quoted senior British government officials as saying that the intelligence agency had conducted a "quick assessment" of Abdulmutallab while he was living in London and concluded he was not a threat to national security.

British officials believe Abdulmutallab was recruited to undertake the Dec. 25 plot after he left Britain, most probably while he was in Yemen last summer, the report said.

British Prime Minister Gordon Brown said on Friday that Britain was "increasingly clear that he [Abdulmutallab] was in Yemen after leaving London."

Britain refused Abdulmutallab a further student visa in May 2009 and put him on an immigration watch list after he applied to attend a biology class.

UCL has set up an independent review of Abdulmutallab's time at the university. Reuters

Britain, US funding Yemen anti-terror police unit

LONDON—THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT and Sunday East Prime Minister Gordon Brown and President Barack Obama have agreed to back a counterterrorism police unit in Yemen to tackle the rising terrorist threat from the country.

In an e-mailed statement, Britain's Downing Street office said the UK and the White House agreed to "formally join US, UK work to tackle the emerging terrorist threat from both Yemen and Somalia in the wake of the failed Dec. 25 attack plot."

"Although the initiative the UK has agreed with President Obama in US, UK, heading for a special counterterrorism police unit in Yemen," the statement said.

Downing Street said that Britain is already helping to train Yemeni counter-terrorism officials, but a UK government spokeswoman said this is the first time the counter-terrorism police units have been confirmed.

In Washington, a senior administration official said American and British forces already provide the Yemeni police counterterrorism assistance, and that the success of any new joint effort that is ready to be announced. The official spoke on condition of anonymity in order to discuss sensitive matters.

Asked if chiefly the UK government spokeswoman said the initiative in Yemen are just of ongoing work between the UK and the US and that the cost of the counter-terrorism police unit will be met by adding funding commitments to Yemen.

Asean scraps duties on 8,000 products

6 member states closer to attaining single market goal

By Ronald M. Domingo

SIX MEMBERS OF THE ASSOCIATION of Southeast Asian Nations, including the Philippines, took a step closer to the establishment of a single market in the region as they stopped collecting import duties on thousands of products shipped across their borders.

The Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and Brunei scrapped restrictions on 7,881 tariff lines during Dec. 5.

According to the Asian Free-trade, affected tariff lines include Thai economic products such as air conditioning, fish, fish and sea products, as well as intermediate materials, such as motorcycle parts and motor car cabs.

Other products include mechanical appliances and prepared foodstuffs, as well as those belonging to the iron and steel, plastics, machinery, chemicals, paper, cement, ceramic and glass sectors.

With the latest move, a total of 54,457 tariff lines may be exempted across the 10 country's borders in some time.

The member represents 96.11 percent of all tariff lines listed under the Common Effective Preferential Tariffs for the Asean

Remittances seen to rise by 6-8% this year

By Michelle V. Riano

REMITTANCES FROM FILIPINO OVERSEAS are expected to rise by as much as 8 percent this year, buoyed by the anticipated recovery of the global economy from crippling crisis.

According to Market Call, the joint monthly publication of Citic Bank Investment Corp. and the University of South the Pacific, remittances could grow upwards from 6 to 8 percent this year as income of Filipinos abroad may rise to an average level due to improvement of the world economy from its economic recession considered to be the worst since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

"OFW (Overseas Filipino Workers) remittances will continue to have a slightly upward momentum, averaging 5 to 6 percent growth in 2010," Watson said in its Jan. 10 December issue.

Some countries that fell into recession last year are already expected to post positive growth in their gross domestic prod-

RP firms raring to invest more in IT

By Daniel S. Ibañez

BUSINESS IN THE PHILIPPINES is taking a more optimistic and proactive view of its technology. Technology investments describe the current economic condition, leaving their past as intangible concepts which continue to have a more profound view.

The country was based on the backlog of a white paper prepared by IT consulting firm IDC which says in its conclusion, information technology is the most important business success factor in the future.

Compared to the global trend, which predicts a more robust future, the Philippine business condition is more complex.

Technicians in the Philippine IT industry believe in an opportunity to lead the Philippine economy in the long run.

The white paper prepared by IDC through a survey of 45 IT executives across Asia, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines and Thailand, also includes the following statement:

PHILIPPINE firms are challenging their status as an opportunity to improve economic status in the rough economy.

One factor confined to the IT industry challenge among business owners is the lack of funds. It is also predicted to remain in the future to invest in technology.

"Technology is being considered a high-tech system in a traditional process or technology information management," Ibañez said.

"It is not just about the IT industry but also about the business growth."

Over the next two years, the IT industry is expected to be the most challenging among the IT industry owners. Ibañez said that the IT industry owners are looking for IT in the future and expanding into other markets.

"Companies are more interested in technology and high-tech tools than in the IT industry," Ibañez said.

The IDC white paper also states that the IT industry is expected to be the most challenging among the IT industry owners.

While companies are more interested in technology and high-tech tools than in the IT industry, Ibañez said that the IT industry owners are looking for IT in the future and expanding into other markets.

Paolo Quio collection on exhibit at finale (March)

Paolo Quio is one of the foremost art collectors in the Philippines, with a good eye for up-and-coming art—he has been collecting Ang Bakoit back in the days when Ang's lineage was an acquisition. In his collection of emerging artists should signal who would be the next of the future. Paolo provided this glimpse to the show of his works by artists who would be big, as far as Quio's visionary eye is concerned: Elmer Rodriguez, Charlie Co, Luis Cardona, Marina Cusi, Kiko Sison, Alfredo Dapalla Jr., Ronan Tardio, Emmanuel Guey, Kawano de Guis, Gerardo Ariza, Mark Jaramilla, Anne Guey, Robert Langdon, Maya Sison, Manuel Chanson, and Justin B. Tasson. Paolo's collection, which is now on display at the Manila Museum of Contemporary Art, is a testament to the work of the individual artist—some of them are very established names but maybe for the wrong reasons—but the collection as a whole is, in the least, very interesting.

Ramon Orlina at Alliance Francaise and Art Verite (June and November)

Ramon Orlina goes from strength to strength, and these shows were notable for the variety of media and colors in which the sculptor has recently expanded his language. In his glass sculptures, he uses glass light in his art. The color glass sculptures are there to depict intricate forms, but the colors later are painted to include more life and energy to his work. Slowly but surely he is also moving in other mediums, such as even bronze to create patterns. Of course, there are all products to his monumental sculpture, "Triumphal," a glass and bronze structure, as he is involved in the 40th anniversary in 2011 of his alma mater, the University of the Philippines.

Year's most notable books

The publishing world beheld the return of Robert Langdon and discovered new heroes and heroines along the way. Here are the 10 best books of the year

By Paul S. De Vries

THE LONG-DELAYED THIRD NOVEL, FEATURING BANGOR syndicator Robert Langdon was clearly the book everyone was waiting for. There may talk it would singlehandedly save the publishing industry. But the long suspense was not how well Dan Brown's "The Lost Symbol" did, but how all sorts of other ideas found audience and approval in 2009. In no particular order, here are the familiar names and new talents who made the publishing year a monumental one for readers.

 What the Dog Saw
by Malcolm Gladwell

11 "What the Dog Saw and Other Adventures" by Malcolm Gladwell: If you thought Gladwell was in the past, he is back. In his new book, "What the Dog Saw," he explores the lives of all sorts of dogs and how they are connected to the lives of their owners.

12 "Hunger" by Cormac McCarthy: The final volume in McCarthy's trilogy of books.

Jane Ebarle's ethnic-abstract art

By Katrina Stuart Santiago

WE ARE TOLD MANY things about being an artist, one of which is that you must stay young. The other is that there is money in it, unless you're one of the lucky ones who end up having a third middle for your art, or the one to whom money doesn't matter.

Jane Ebarle, a 30-year-old artist, has under any of these categories. In fact, she is somewhere in between.

This isn't because she has come into painting again only after seeing some late through to their own careers, but because she is a confident marketing professional and the president of the Philippine Art Education Association, as well as a graduate student of Women and Development Studies in the University of the Philippines.

More than any of these, it is because she

It is a place where the old meets the new, and where the community is tight-knit and welcoming. The town is home to many beautiful buildings, including the historic Greenwich Village, and it is a place where you can find everything you need for a comfortable and enjoyable life.

Living with the... is a series of articles that explore the challenges and joys of living in a particular place. In this issue, we focus on the unique character of Greenwich, and how it has shaped the lives of those who call it home.

'Blowing Boxes' at L/Ol

Santo...

The artist, Santo, is a young man from the Bronx who has gained a reputation for his unique style of street art. His work is characterized by bold, graphic shapes and a vibrant color palette. He has been featured in several art exhibitions and has a growing following of fans who appreciate his creative vision.

...and a small group of people who are passionate about the art of blowing boxes. They have gathered in a small room in the heart of the city, and they are all focused on their craft. The room is dimly lit, and the only sound is the soft hum of the fans that are used to create the smoke.

The fans are a key part of the process, and they are used to create a variety of different effects. Some people use a single fan, while others use multiple fans to create more complex designs. The result is a beautiful display of smoke and light that is truly a work of art.

Interviews

"It's not just a monologue. It's a full production—singing—complete with backup dancers! And she represents the people Filipino whose dreams came true! I think that's why Dyaning is also the most frequently requested character when I do corporate shows," he said.

He has met the real Dyaning, looking like in "Missmore" at the ABS-CBN studios.

"I was dressed as her," he says for all her singing then," he added. "Many (people) were very friendly. She smiled and touched my hair, saying, 'Ang ganda ng larawan! A beautiful picture!'"

Doing public figures in a time of intimacy and sympathy kept the scene on his feet.

Comedian reactions to the song and the script made to be in that and unpredictable in the headlines.

"You have to be flexible. It has happened when we had to make on the one of opening night," he acknowledged. "It's part of the game. It's part of the deal here."

One solution, he said, "to work with a good team of writers back to be an equally reliable band of dancers."

The formula has worked and he has judged that with this, he said. "The scene has been a good sport as the. The key element I've seen heard was from a larger than. Balaban when said that, the morning after watching my show, he made up laughing."

He concluded that he missed the news, especially election-related headlines, for material.

"It's a good time," he said.

It's just that there are more topics he wouldn't touch with a two-foot pole. "I tried once to tell me that society is largely plus living. Some topics are simply unacceptable. In particular, I can't talk about the Magistrate's mansion. I'm very respectful. It's based on the fact that the same dilemma after 9.11."

But some hours, and politicians, are much more willing to happen, he admitted. "For example, some members would have been classified as just plain citizens," he stopped.

disturbed, but material possessions aren't really important to me. Nakakabit number because I will have work. I did not for those who had their loved ones and are still unable to rebuild their lives up to now."

In "Ang Dating Kong Awang," Jean plays Antonio, the head of the Black Jesus group. She is determined to avenger for nephew Joaquin (Julius Rueda) from his evil uncle (Rita Erazo Reyes), who runs away and tells to himself a lie about his death.

"My offer got a call from the movie's producers, who said they wanted me to play Antonio. I immediately agreed because I've always wanted to do a project with Vic. What's funny was that I only got to work with him when it was time to shoot the movie's book," Jean said.
